ENDANGERED SPECIES BOOKMARKS

San Joaquin Kit Fox

(Vulpes macrotis mutica)

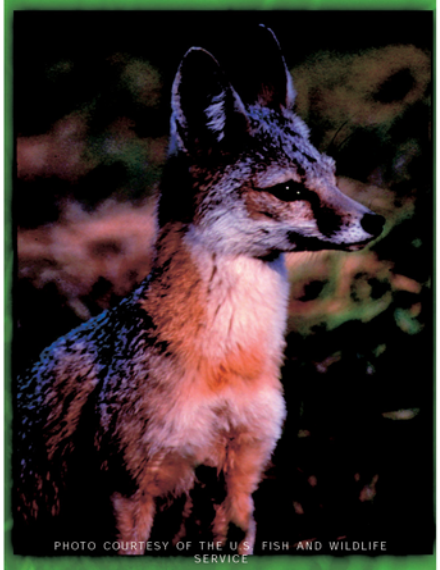

PHOTO COURTESY OF THE U.S. FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE

Protected at Camp Roberts and Fort Hunter Liggett (California)

Habitat: Oak woodland, alkali sink scrubland, and vernal pool and alkali meadow communities

Dens are used for housing and protection; one fox may use several dens

Smallest member of the dog family in North America

Active year round, mainly at night

Listed as endangered on March 11, 1967

Front

Design provided by US Army Environmental Center

For more information: USAEC Public Affairs Office, (410) 436-2556

http://aec.army.mil

The U.S. Army is steward to 16.7 million acres of land across many diverse ecosystems. Because of the way the Army trains on and manages this land, these natural environments have become havens of plant and animal biodiversity. Currently, 172 of the more than 1,200 plants and animals federally listed as threatened or endangered are found on Army lands in the United States.

U.S. Army Environmental Center
1-800-USA-3845

PRINTED ON RECYCLED PAPER

Back